Excerpt from The Giddings Family: Or the Descendants of George Giddings, Who Came Form St. Albans, England, to Ipswich, Mass;, In 1635 From the most ancient times mankind has been more power fully moved to heroic and noble deeds by the thought of the fame that should live after them than by any other considera tion. It is a familiar saying that blood will tell; men are proud to own blooded horses or cattle, yet speak as though it were a credit not to know the name of their grand-parents; entertain ing the notion that they need no personal record of themselves outside their family circle. Yet the knowledge of a record of worthy ancestors must induce a good life and promote virtuous and honorable character, and bind families and kindred with a sacred tie. If diseases are hereditary, so must traits of character be; and how often are predominant traits of character transmitted from one generation to another. In an oration on the life of Gen. George H. Thomas, Garfield said, Each human being possesses forces and qualities that may date back centuries and find their origin in the life and thoughts and deeds of remote ancestors, - forces, the germs of which, envel Oped in the awful mystery of life, have been transmitted silently from generation to generation each new life is thus heir of all the ages. Blaine, in his eulogy of President Garfield, said that, Garfield was proud of his blood, and delighted to dwell on the traits of his ancestors.
