Excerpt: .find a greater r cent of correlation than can be ascribed to chance or error. oreover., the correlations arrange themselves in a hierarchy. thus giving evidence, the authors say, of a common fund of energy or general intel ence which may be exercised in a vanet of types ofmental wor. This is a startling return to an old clief. Yet it must still be emphasized that neither the experimental method used in testing for correlation nor the mathematical treatment of the results is well enough established to justify its use as a foundation for educational dogma. To this opinion the Bntish investigators subscribe. But if the method is still not adequately verified, what shall we say of the crude experiments of fifteen years ago? Their use suggests vividly the remark of Hodgdon; Whatever you are totally ignorant of assert to be the exnlation of...
