The late Carli Zoeller born Berlin, 1840, died London, 13th July, 1889, aged 49, Bandmaster 7th Hussars, and subsequently of the Second Life Guards, was especially well known as a virtuoso of the viole damour, for which he wrote many compositions, concertos, trios, anthems, etc. , a monument of his skill and labour is his New Method for the Viole d'Amour, London, 1885, containing thirty-six folio pages of studies, scales, etc. , and a history of the instrument. I take this opportunity of mentioning my indebtedness to him for many interesting tables on this subject, and much information, I deeply regret his loss, but for which there need have been no necessity for the employment of my pen on this subject. Among many others (and a splendid library of books on the viole damour), he possessed a viole damour...
