Excerpt from Exercises in Reading, Writing, Spelling and Arithmetic for Alabama Adult Schools The results which have been achieved in our efforts to eliminate illiteracy are encouraging to those who are familiar with conditions. Numbers of teachers volunteered for service during the summer of 1915 and many schools were taught. The declaration, that those who had grown to manhood and womanhood without securing the elementary tools of learning could not be induced to go to school, has been silenced by many examples of men and women who in the short space of a month have learned to read and write. Inasmuch as it has been declared over and over again by those engaged in the work that the lack of a suitable text upon which to base instruction was a very great handicap, the Commission directed its secretary-treasurer to prepare a textbook for use in the adult schools. This booklet, though official, is not final. No claim is made that the sequence of topics or the subject matter is ideal. In fact, there are many things that run counter to current educational theory and practice so far as the teaching of children goes. Experience has shown, however, that most of the work will be done by those who are already actively engaged in teaching, and furthermore, that persons of mature years have a much broader experience than children, think much more intelligently, and are capable of much more intensive application. It is the wish of the Commission, therefore, that these exercises shall be generally used in all adult schools and that frank and free criticism shall be made to the Commission through its secretary-treasurer.
