Excerpt from The Locomotive, 1938-1939, Vol. 42 When welding first began to be substituted for riveted construction, the natural tendency was to retain the details adapted to riveting, but it is becoming more and more appreciated that. In the design of pressure vessels to be fabricated by fusion welding. The peculiarities of welding must be taken into consideration. However, the use of welding as a means of fabrication makes possible much simplification that may lead and has led to very faulty design. An outstanding example of this in the use of dished heads without a ange. (see Figure Many fail ures have resulted from this type of construction. The weakness lies in the fact that the weld comes at the point where the greatest stresses are concentrated.
