Is there any other cure for wrong thinking, or remedy for false sentiment, than the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ? Atticus G. Haygood. Oxford, Ga. AN ADVENTURE IN VENICE. Chapter I. Five days I had spent in Venice. In that short period an industrious sight-seer may visit many points of interest; but if he depends upon the highly colored stories of the average professional who pilots him through the memorials of a thousand years of history, he will know but little about the marble palaces and wonders of the City in the Sea. Of course I was acquainted with the record which this grand old commonwealth has made, and the impressions of many storied volumes were recalled as I stood face to face with the mute witnesses of the glorious past. The Doge...
