PROMETHENA PRESS. Paperback. Condition: New. 492 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 1.2in.A psychological thriller. . . richly drawn characters. . . an innovative, powerfully motivational novel. Dr. Michael J. Hurd, psychologist and nationally syndicated talk show host What happens when your work and your love clash with your deepest values Leon Skillman is a rich and renowned American sculptor. Cynical, smart, handsome, and glib, hes the darling of socialites, the press, art critics, and gossip columnists. But when he meets Tara Niforous, a beautiful, highly intelligent and highly challenging Greek-American archeologist, his smug and sensational existence is shatteredand conflicts long buried in his soul boil to the surface. Born in New York City of immigrant parents and living in Greece as an adult, Tara is an idealist who lives for her ancient bronze and marble gods. But she falls irresistibly in love with Leon, who looks and acts like one in the flesh. Meanwhile, Dimitrios KokonasTaras older employer at the Athens museum where she workshas for years been secretly in love with his independent but feminine protg. Intensely romantic, yet painfully shy, Dimitrios vows at last to reveal his passion to Tara. . . but now he must challenge a young god for the woman he adores. Set in Manhattans fast-paced, glamorous and controversial art world with exotic forays to Greece, Turkey, and Palm Beach, CROSSPOINTS is unlike any other romantic suspense novel because of its thought-provoking ideas and perceptive insights. It explores not only the tangled conflicts of the human heart but also the clashing values that lie at their core. Its an unforgettable love story that simultaneously unveils the hidden worlds of art, archeology, family, religion, and high societyworlds where the rare quest for noble ideals must overcome the raw pull of sex, drugs, money, fameand sometimes,...
