Forgotten Books, 2017. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Religious Studies: Sketches and Poems No one can read Mrs. Stowe s writings as a whole with out perceiving how constant is the appeal to the religious sensibilities. Her greatest book, which took captive the humblest reader and such a genius in literature as George Sand, was in a marked degree a religious book; and again and again, even in playful scenes, there is a quick passage to the religious nature. The explanation is in the simple fact that Mrs. Stowe herself from early girlhood to her latest years was governed by religion, and it is not sur prising, therefore, that an entire volume Should be gathered from her writings exclusively given over to direct expres sion of religious feeling and thought. She would gladly, especially in her later life, have con fined herself to writing of this sort, for the realities of faith, especially the presence of the Divine Master, came to have a commanding power over her mind and heart, and to make her almost impatient of much concern about adventures of the ordinary sort. Even the reminiscence of the racy life of the New England of her childhood could not absorb her. I would much rather, she writes in 1876 to her son Charles, have written another such a book as Footsteps of the Master, but all, even the religious papers, are gone mad on serials. The book which she was then writing was Poyanne People, and the reader knows what a thread of religious experience runs through that lively narrative.
