Excerpt from Review of the Transactions of the Credit Mobilier Company: And an Examination of That Portion of the Testimony Taken by the Committee of Investigation and Reported to the House of Representatives at the Last Session of the Forty-Second Congress, Which Relates to Mr. Garfield The events of the late winter recall forcibly a declaration made more than twenty-two centuries ago, by a man who possessed a profound knowledge of human nature and society. In answering a grave charge made against his public conduct, he said he did not stand on equal ground with his accusers, for the reason that people listen to accusation more readily than to defense. This remark has sometimes been thought cynical and unjust; but there is much in our recent history that gives it force. In no period of the political life of this country has the appetite for scandal been keener, or its exercise less restrained, than during the last year. One of our most brilliant and influential journalists, in an address delivered a few days since to a convention of his professional brethren...
