William Henry Harrison: Together With His Letter to Simon Bolivar The distinguished soldier, patriot, and statesman, who is the subject of this notice, is descended from one of the most illustrious families of that mother of statesmen, Virginia. His father was one of the delegates from that commonwealth to, and a leading member of the memorable revolutionary congress. When John Hancock was elected President of that body, and hesitated, through modesty, to take his seat, Mr. Harrison, being a large man, seized Mr. Hancock, who was small, and carried him and placed him in the chair; observing, that they would let Mother Britain know that congress would have the man she proscribed to preside over them. During the revolution he was chairman of the committee of foreign affairs, and was great, among the great men of that day. In 1783, he was appointed Governor of his native state, and was one of the most popular Chief Magistrates that ever presided over that commonwealth. He died in 1791, leaving three sons, of whom the subject of this short biographical notice was the youngest. William Henry Harrison, was born at the family seat, called Berkley, twenty-five miles below Richmond, on James River, on the 9th of February, 1773; two years before the commencement of the American Revolution. His early education was at a Grammar School, and afterwards at an Academy in Southampton county, and at the College of Hampden Sidney. After the completion of his academical studies, he was placed by his father in his seventeenth year, in the office of Dr. Leiper, a physician of Richmond, as...
