THE METALLIC INLAY (CLASSIC REPRINT)

Forgotten Books. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.4in. Excerpt from The Metallic Inlay One of the oldest methods, in imitation of the inlays accidentally made, as described above, consisted in lightly filling the cavity with sponge-gold, carefully removing the whole, saturating with solder and resetting with cement. Numerous other methods soon followed, in which a matrix, as used for glass and porcelain inlays, played the most important part. The difference in these methods lay in the use of various kinds of foil, viz. , gold, gold and platinum, and pure platinum; in the method of removing the matrix from the cavity; and in the use of gold of different karats for filling the matrix and for the production of contours and cusps. The success attending the use of gold inlays in large cavities justified the attempt to use them for still larger restorations. The difficulty of building up such large contours and cusps with sponge-gold and solder, soon brought forth new methods. A matrix was made of thin 24 kar. Plate. A cap, suitable for the case, was swedged on the die plate of a crown outfit and the requisite part soldered upon the matrix. In this manner the first hollow inlay originated. This procedure was soon improved upon in so many ways, that the hollow gold inlay can claim more methods for its construction than any other inlay filling, be it of gold or porcelain. In spite of these numerous methods, the construction of hollow inlays, instead of becoming simpler, became more and more complicated.
