But if he took his medicine like a little man, he was soon in the swim, and ready to enjoy the discomforts of the next victim. Such is life in a cow camp. CHAPTER V. THE BEGINNING OF CATTLE STEALING IN TEXAS ON A LARGE SCALE. Before the war and for many years afterward, cattle stealing in Texas was virtually licensed. Don't understand by this that our honorable law-makers granted a regular license to men for so much money, to steal cattle. Not that. It was simply a finable offense to steal a cow. It was a license on the same plan that gambling and other like offenses against the peace and dignity of the State of Texas and other States, specially in the cities, have been permitted to be carried on, a kind of an understanding with the peace officers that at regular intervals they should pay their fines and run on undisturbed until the next regular grub time with the officers came round. The only difference being that a man's time for contributing to the State for stealing was not a stated one, coming only when he was caught, or some poor fellow, who couldn't steal as fast as some other fellow, put up a job on him and had him pulled. He would then come up and either plead guilty or fight it. In either case, if he was found guilty the fine was 20, which he easily paid and could...
