The war gave our mute, songless people a voice. The singing of war songs, popular songs, folk songs and stately hymns became amazingly general. The musicians of the country, filled with the spirit of patriotism, gave not only of themselves, their money and their talents, but also what in many cases was hardest of all - apparently abandoned their standards of taste and acquiesced in the use of music which but a short time before had received their severest criticism. But with the cessation of the war many of them have said: Let us now return to sanity and good taste. During the war we let down the bars in the singing of popular music; it has served its purpose of unifying and fortifying us. But that necessity is past and we must immediately return to our pre-war standards. Let us hasten to put up the barriers so that we may keep out this motley horde of cheap songs which threaten to engulf us and to destroy all good music. No one who cares for music; no one who cares for the welfare of our country - and the ideals of the two are closely related - can turn a deaf ear to such statements. Such a sincere point of view deserves careful consideration. Shall the leaders of America, the thoughtful men and women who help form opinion, place a ban upon popular music and trumpet the call to use only the finer things - the folk song and...
