Sounds Terrifying, 2016. CD-Audio. Condition: New. Unabridged. Language: English . Brand New. Spine-chilling short stories from three master horror writers Night in Whitechapel French short-story master Guy de Maupassant offers this chilling look into one of the world s best known cities. When two young men make a trek to London on a cold December evening, they expect to take in the city and maybe a pub or two along the way. But a chance encounter with a mysterious woman soon has them questioning not only the proceedings of their evening but their sanity as well. Was It a Dream? Guy de Maupassant once again delivers a spine-tingling narrative. A young man recounts the tragic death of his love, claimed by an unknown illness. In his grief, he wanders the cemetery where she is buried to find a dark secret that she, and many other corpses, share. Caterpillars Stories of the supernatural from E.F. Benson have been terrifying audiences for decades--even making the transition to television adaptation. In Caterpillars, a man recalls his terrifying stay at a haunted Italian villa. You will never look at caterpillars in the same way. John Mortonson s Funeral Perhaps best known for The Devil s Dictionary, Ambrose Bierce is a mainstay of nineteenth-century American literature. In John Mortonson s Funeral, Bierce adds horror to his satirical lens. The mourners at this funeral will be forever changed.
