In fertilized ponds, bluegills should weigh 4 or 5 ounces and bass one pound one year after stocking. In unfertilized ponds on poor soils, growth will be much slower. Ponds built on fertile soils are more productive due to the soil fertility in the pond plus added material brought in by water following rains. You should scatter the fertilizer evenly over the pond. A five gallon can which will float can be used while wading in larger ponds, and small ponds can be fertilized from the shore. The fertilizer greatly increases the growth of...
