Excerpt from Blends of Chemically Treated Cotton Fibers With Untreated Cotton Fibers to Improve Abrasion Resistance of Durable Press Garments While the application of resins to obtain wash-wear or easy-care properties in apparel textile items has long been known to significantly lower their abrasion resistance and strength, the problem was not too serious when chemical add-ons of only 3 to 4 percent were used. In the case of the deferred-cure resins, considerably higher chemical add-ons and higher curing temperatures have been used in the case of the conventional resins to speed production and to accomplish the curing of multiple layers of fabrics. The overall result of these changes has been that some permanent-press cotton apparel items were degraded to the point where significant abrasion damage resulted in fewer than 10 wash and tumble drying cycles.
