

Life is as Simple as a Butterfly

By Valentina Kirichilina

XLIBRIS. Paperback. Condition: New. 52 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.1in. So where has he gone, the red nosed man The one with the misty washed light blue eyes That man with the guilty little boyish grin Today he was very still Lying silently, motionless, in his coffin gray Gray as the day In the funeral parlor Where a few gathered to pay their last respects To Rudolph my half brother Who was finally laid to rest in peace This is a true story of a soul that was bound and captured in a state of hopelessness, despair and poverty that unfortunately exists in this world even though there is help available for them. The desire for the addiction that consumes their life steals the reality of its consequences; eventually killing the participant; destroying any hope of a future for them with family and friends and life in general. The addiction becomes their reason for existence; the reason for waking up and the last satisfying desire before lying down to sleep. The addiction could be one of alcohol or drugs; often the root cause for crime, homelessness and promiscuity in order to provide the needed finances to feed their obsession....
