Reviews

Great electronic book and useful one. It can be written in straightforward terms rather than difficult to understand. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Excerpt from The Critical Condition of the Country: Remarks of the Hon. Warren Winslow of North Carolina, in the House of Representatives, January 29, 1861, Upon the Report of the Committee of the States Mr. Winslow said: Mr. Speaker: When I took service upon the committee of the States, to which position you had kindly assigned me, I confess I did so with hut slight hope that its efforts would avail to the restoration of peace and concord among our people. I had said, in my place in the Thirty-Fourth Congress, looking at the then existing condition of things, and painfully apprehensive of the very consequences that now threaten the country, that touching what I deemed the wrongs to my section, I would forbear until forbearance itself would even seem to cease to be a virtue, and that if the crisis should come, I would endeavor to discharge my duty to the whole country, and especially to that section where my fortunes had fallen and where my destinies were fixed. In redemption of that pledge, I set out with the determination that I would exert all my power to effect such suitable settlements that the Union might be preserved, harmony restored, our institutions strengthened and perpetuated, and the slave holding States reconciled to the continuance of a Union which was fast loosing its hold upon their affections. I was not indifferent to the Union of these States; nay, to preserve it was, with me, a labor of love. But, in my judgment, no patched-up compromise, no alleviating and palliating remedy was either just or prudent; nor did I subscribe to the dogma of its preservation at all hazards. A Union which...
