A VIVID MEMOIR OF WINNIE LOPINTO'S EXPERIENCES AT THE WASP! Winnie LoPinto wrote Go Home Little Fifinella as a young woman after returning from Texas in 1944 from her training as a WASP (Women Airforce Service Pilots). She had great dreams of becoming a pilot then and that is why she volunteered to serve at the risk of her own life with the WASP, just for the chance to fly. Her biographical account of her experiences as a WASP trainee in Sweetwater Texas is full of the language and flavor of the time. Her lively style allows us to relive those times along with her. The exhilaration and the adventure of youth and the disappointments that follow. It has delighted thousands of visitors who originally downloaded it from her web site and brought tears to the eyes of those who knew her. Winnie is a young woman with great dreams of becoming a pilot. She joins the WASP in hope of serving her country and doing what she loved since she was a little girl, fly! Winnie was a slight woman, barely 100 pounds. Her legs didn't reach the brakes in certain models and she often loosened her seatbelt to try to slide down, at great risk of her life. In one occasion she nearly fell out, and in another her hands were so cold riding in an open cabin in 32 degrees whether, they did not respond and she almost lost control. According to the instructors, that kind of weather would ground male pilots, but the WASP were tested to the absolute limit for reasons revealed in the book. One of Winnie's friends from the WASP was browsing the web and...
