Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Danvis Folks The same wearied air pervaded the precincts of Joseph Hill's home and the house itself. The hens lay panting with drooped wings under the scant Shade of the currant bushes, whose Shriv eled remnant of fruit gave no promise of refresh ing coolness; their half-grown progeny stalked aimlessly about the yard in indolent quest of nothing, while they grated out the discordant yelp which is neither peep nor cluck, and expresses nothing if it be not continual discontent; and the ducks waddled home, thirsty and unhappy, from the dried-up puddle. The hollyhock stalks stood naked and forlorn among the drooping leaves, with only here and there a blossom too stunted to tempt a bumble bee showing among the browning buttons Of seed vessels. The morning-glory leaves hung limp upon their twisted vines, that had evidently blown their last purple trumpet to call the bees, clutching their supporting cords only with a dying grasp. All the house side posies were withered, chiny asters, sweet-williams, and sturtiums nothing held up its head but the sturdy houseleeks hens and chickens their mis tress called them, and nursed them in their box in doors and out the year round, for their oddity and their repute for curing corns.
