Night after night, she d dreamed of finding love and adventure somewhere other than Texas. After being the youngest student to graduate from her medical school program, she decided to plant new roots on the East Coast. Her sorority sister created an illusion of Washington D.C. being a city overflowing with young, eligible, prestigious, sexy, chocolate men. So quite naturally she decided that s where she would call home. She was greeted by one sexy man after another. On her first day at work she had an instant connection with Henry, one of the radiologist technicians in her department. He d just gotten out of a tumultuous marriage, and planned on working on himself until he shook Carol s hand. Was it smart of him to dive back into a relationship so quickly instead of waiting it out? Then there was Thomas. He was the most attractive man Carol had ever bumped into. His chiseled body and, manly demeanor begged for her attention. He knew how to impress and get the ladies with very little effort, until he met Carol. The newfound attention was flattering until she was forced to decide who really loved her versus who loved the idea of having her.
