By Katrina Z.S. Schwartz

University of Pittsburgh Press, United States, 2006. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. In this groundbreaking book, Katrina Schwartz examines the intersection of environmental politics, globalization, and national identity in a small East European country: modern-day Latvia. Based on extensive ethnographic research and lively discourse analysis, it explores that country's post-Soviet responses to European assistance and political pressure in nature management, biodiversity conservation, and rural development. These responses were shaped by hotly contested notions of national identity articulated as contrasting visions of the ideal rural landscape. The players in this story include Latvian farmers and other traditional rural dwellers, environmental advocates, and professionals with divided attitudes toward new European approaches to sustainable development. An entrenched set of forestry and land management practices, with roots in the Soviet and pre-Soviet eras, confront growing international pressures on the small country to conform to current (Western) notions of environmental responsibility - notions often perceived by Latvians to be at odds with local interests. While the case is that of Latvia, the dynamics Schwartz explores have wide applicability and speak powerfully to broader theoretical discussions about sustainable development, social constructions of nature, the sources of nationalism, and the impacts of...

Reviews

Without doubt, this is the very best operate by any writer. This is for all those who statte that there was not a well worth reading through. I discovered this pdf from my dad and i suggested this book to find out.
