It is one of the best books. Better than ever, though I am quite late in starting to read this one. You won't feel monotony at any moment of the time (that's what catalogues are for regarding in the event you check with me).

Excerpt from Geology and Hydrology of the Site of the Hallam Nuclear Power Facility, Nebraska: Studies of Sites for Nuclear Energy Facilities The site of the Hallam Nuclear Power Facility is at the upper end of the Salt Creek drainage basin near the intersection of the divides separating the drainage basins of Salt Creek, the Big Nemaha River, and the Big Blue River. It is 1 miles north of Hallam, Nebr., and about 18 miles south of Lincoln. The area is underlain by unconsolidated deposits of Pleistocene age which in places are more than 400 feet thick. These deposits rest on limestone and shale of Permian age. The saturated unconsolidated deposits of Pleistocene age are the principal aquifer from which ground water is pumped; irrigation wells that tap this aquifer yield copious supplies. Perched-water zones that rest on compact deposits of glacial till also are common and supply many shallow wells in the area. The depth to water in the principal aquifer ranges from a few feet to about 185 feet. In general, the depth to water in the valleys is much less than that in the upland. The aquifers are recharged by precipitation within the area and by ground-water movement from the west. The annual amount of local recharge from precipitation to the principal aquifer is believed to be very small.
