In the background are dimly perceived the tall buildings of the cities on each bank. During the Act, morning brightens behind the towers and chimneys and a pale gray mist slowly lifts. The city wakes - noises of traffic are heard louder and clearer - girls pass on the way to work. Barges glide by in the river drawn by puffing tug-boats - ferries swarm and whistle shrilly - the crowd grows denser and blacker. Now and then a workman crossing the Long Bridge stops to look at something of great interest farther up stream. Enter Hilda, a dark, resolute figure against the bright sky. She comes eagerly across the bridge and stops, leaning her elbows on the railing. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
