The Vietnam War is raging. Her mother is dying and her father is drowning in pain. She is sheltered, religious and completely unprepared to fall in love with William Steele. William has it all. A product of his family's legendary reputation, he's rich, reckless and known for pushing boundaries. He stands up to gossip by upping the ante, one rebellious night at a time. The reality of his world sweeps away Margaret's innocence and puts her in the middle of a place she's never known. With William at her side, she can't help but question her own boundaries and the temptation to ignore them is running high. Then, one night, one poor decision and Margaret becomes the one with everything to lose. Will their young love be strong enough to hold it all together? This item ships from multiple locations.
