

Learning Mechanisms in Smoking

By -

Aldine Transaction. Paperback. Condition: New. 237 pages. Dimensions: 8.9in. x 6.0in. x 0.7in. Psychologists have spent thousands of years studying the learning processes of the white rat, yet until recently they have neglected the laboratory of everyday social behavior for studying learning in man. In this book the leading experts in learning theory and pharmacology examine the role of learning mechanisms in smoking. The results provide new insights into the study of learning and determine new directions for future research on smoking and its control. Two opening essays establish the framework for the volume. One is a thorough review of research on controlling smoking behavior, and the other is a review of findings on the personality of the smoker and the non-smoker. A second part includes four essays. The first discusses the role played by habit in smoking, defining habit in terms of fixed behavior patterns, over learned to the point of becoming automatic, and marked by decreasing awareness and increasing dependency on secondary rather than primary reinforcement. The second discusses mechanisms of self-control, concentrating on humiliation or the realization of membership in an ethically repugnant class as one typical means of achieving such control. The third is an excellent statement...
