This importance has recently escalated with the imminent emergence of new industries in biotechnology and high-performance materials. Separations will continue to remain important in bulk chemical manufacturing, petroleum processing, and the other standard areas of chemical engineering interest. The development of new industries requiring the expertise of chemical engineers leads to problems and opportunities for chemical engineering education. Chemical engineering students need to be prepared for both the "known future" and the "unknown future." The known future includes the use of standard chemical engineering separation methods such as distillation and absorption which will remain important for many years. The unknown future involves the use of many relatively new separation methods such as adsorption, chromatography, electrophoresis, membrane separations, and zone melting. Up to now, these methods have not been included in the education of most undergraduate and graduate students. 707 pp. Englisch.
