

Curious Places in Staffordshire.

By MR Kerry Butters

Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 234 x 156 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This is a book about the odd and unusual buildings and locations within Staffordshire. Such curiosities can include buildings, structures, locations or landforms that are either rare or unusual architecturally, or are associated with a fascinating story, particularly one that might not have reached the pages of the history books. The area defined by this book is the post 1992 county. It is a remarkably varied area and an extensive one. The book divides the county reflecting the variation in landscape, culture and curiosities that exist within its boundaries. The Staffordshire Moorlands are partly within the Peak District and to an extent reflects its Derbyshire neighbour. Within here is an extensive collection of curiosities - churches, churchyards ancient crosses, industrial remains, scenic spots and a theme park with some history! As a whole, the Staffordshire Moorlands deserves to be better known. The Potteries of the Five Towns and Newcastle under Lyme are well known to collectors of Wedgwood, readers of Arnold Bennett and students of industrial archeology. They contain some interesting curiosities both with the urban areas and...
