Excerpt from Elements of Notation and Harmony: With Fifty-Eight Exercises for Use in Public Institutions of Learning and for Self-Instruction The following compilation of the musical elements was prompted by the need of a book, which should contain not only the necessary definitions, rules, and explanatory examples, but likewise (and chiefly) a sufficient number of exercises in the needful material of repetition, thus enabling the pupil to fix and supplement, through private application, what he had learned in the lessons. These exercises therefore form an integral part of the work, and render the same peculiarly adapted for self-instruction. No one desiring to make music intelligently can skip these exercises, especially where they have to do with scales and intervals. The arrangement of the course of study is such, as its oral presentation in the elementary classes in theory of a musical seminary appears to demand. It is taken for granted, that a practical course of singing, or of instrumental playing, either has preceded or will accompany the present course.
