Defense officials responsible for preparing the report said that the level of control selected - 190, 000 MTOPS - was driven by the market and what the administration believes it can control, not by the military and national security applications that could be run on high performance computers. The Presidents report did not discuss the impact on U. S. national security Assessment of Impact on of countries such as Russia and China obtaining high performance National Security Not computing power up to the new control threshold, as required by law. Such Conducted a national security assessment has been a long-term, executive branch requirement. For example, section 1402 of the National Defense Authorization Act of 2000 requires the President to annually assess the cumulative impact of licensed transfers of military-sensitive technology to countries and entities of concern and to identify possible countermeasures that may be necessary to overcome the use of such technologies. In addition,...
