By Chauncey Mitchell DePew

Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from A Retrospect of 25 Years With the New York Central Railroad and Its Allied Lines The cross-roads between a public or business life had been reached. Which way P was the absorbing question. William H. Vanderbilt said: We want your services and the Commodore remarked, Chauncey, politics don't pay. The business of the future in this country is railroading. The commission was attorney for the New York and Harlem Railroad Company, but the duties covered everything official or personal in which the Commodore was interested. For the last eleven years of his life I was in almost daily consultation with this remarkable man. He accumulated the largest fortune ever made His long life was an uninterrupted succession of wars and triumphs. He always fearlessly gave battle in the fierce business competitions of his time, and never lost one. The most extraordinary fact in his career is that he gained the majority of his vast wealth after he had passed threescore and ten. His methods of managing the railway properties in which he acquired a controlling interest were...
