Grieg Pedersen, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Award Finalist in the Social Change category of the 2017 Best Book Awards! What started as a guide to political mythology grew into a call for action as well. We re at a critical point in our history. If we keep on the way we are we may not survive it, but there is hope! Hope that our newest adult generation, the Millennials, can solve our problems by thinking about them so differently from their parents and grandparents that most of us can t even understand it. The author sees greatness in them. Politics is part mythology. Like the Emperor in the famous story, people and their cultures are vain. They like to keep an image of themselves that s better than they deserve, to cover their faults in glorious cloth. To do that, cultures tell stories. They tell them to their people, to each other, and to themselves. They lie to themselves about themselves, inventing the clothes they d like to have and telling everyone they have them, hoping people won t see the blemishes underneath. Sometimes the stories become reality. Other times they re destructive or just deceptive. We ll strip some of those clothes from the Empire, one set at a time, and see how they re made. After all, who doesn t love a naked Emperor? We tell our kids not to give in to peer pressure, then do what we think our neighbors think we should do. Except it s not. What is it, really? American politics and culture have become so rancorous and uncivil that it s almost guaranteed that unpopular candidates will win and violence will follow. There s a way to fix that. Something you...
