Dual Reflection (Classic Reprint)

By Eve Orme

Forgotten Books. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 188 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.4in. Excerpt from Dual Reflection: Madge Wilton, much against her normal inclinations, was a colonel's wife. She had never wanted to be one, but during a hectic week at the beginning of the first Great War she had fallen in love with her husband, who was a man who believed in fearing God, honouring the King, and marital relations, so there was no help for it. The ship's engines had stopped. Were here, and it's another lovely sunny morning, she said to the girl who had been her stable companion throughout the voyage, and who was now pulling on a pair of stockings, and that's what most of us are going to say for the next three years, barring the merciful dispensation of the rains. Madge was expansive in manner, seldom discreet, and some people on board had thought her vulgar. She knew this, and it amused her. Nothing would have persuaded her to have tried to be refined. Now she was making up more lavishly than her critics would have thought necessary. You shouldn't have come out here, she said, but I've told...
