Excerpt from Harvard College Class of 1910: Tenth Anniversary Report Of the fifteen names on our Roll of Honor five are those of men killed in action, or, as the French so much more finely say, dead on the field of honor. Braxton Bigelow, who represented us in the army of Great Britain, was killed in Flanders, a Captain of Field Artillery, in the British Expeditionary Force. Lieut. Hugh Blanchard and Private Charles Lilly, both serving in the Infantry, were killed in the great counter-attack of July 18-19, 1918, the turning-point of the decisive year. How little they or we dreamed, when they played side by side in the line of our Senior Class football team, that ten years later, within twenty-four hours of each other, they were to spend their all in a far greater game! Major James McKenna, 165th Infantry, was killed in that glorious and terrible day s fighting across the Ourcq at the end of last July, an undying memory to all who had any share in it. Edward Perry, Lieutenant of Engineers, was killed on March 30, 1918, in a defensive action near the Bois des Tailloux. To these five men death came swift, violent, and merciful. To two others he came with more cruel and lingering step, for they are dead of wounds received in action. Of the record of Norman Prince, founder of the Lafayette Escadrille, it is needless to speak. One of those happy pioneers who anticipated our nation s entry into the war, most famous name on our Roll, his honors speak for him, - member of...
