Jacana Media (Pty) Ltd, South Africa, 2010. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 234 x 156 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. This title comes at an important time in the development of Southern Africa s trade policy. Trade policy and trade performance are important elements in the region s growth and development strategies, but the future is becoming ever more uncertain. This is partly because regional trade policy is now almost entirely dictated by often-erratic trade negotiations processes: there is no clear unilateral thrust. Most agree that external influences in the form of economic partnership agreement (EPA) negotiations with the EU and the World Trade Organisation s floundering Doha Round have the potential to significantly alter the region s trade policy landscape, but few are willing to predict precisely how. Given South Africa s importance to its immediate subregion and the broader SADC region, it is incumbent upon all interested parties to better understand South Africa s shifting priorities and future policy thrusts, and what implications these might have for countries in the region. This title admirably delivers such insights in the trade policy field. Beginning with an authoritative overview of the political economy of trade and investment policy reform in developing countries since the 1980s, the title then delves into the South African experience post-1994, after which it analyses the potential implications for South Africa s customs union partners (Botswana, Lesotho, Namibia and Swaziland) of South Africa s trade and industrial policy choices. The title analysis of South Africa s contemporary debates over whether or not the country can or should attempt to become a stronger developmental state are of particular interest, as the ruling African National Congress remains committed to such a path, however ill defined. The book also provides a fascinating overview of South Africa s trade...
