Not illustrated. 1912 Excerpt: . 79, with the intention of making the photographic and photometric scales coincide for Class A. The photometric magnitude of Polaris is 2.12. Therefore, the adopted difference for Class F, to which Polaris belongs, is +0.50. The mean of the differences for 8 stars of Class A or Ap, taken from Table XV, is--0.02. This corresponds to a difference of +0.52. The difference for H. R. 2693, Class F8p, is +0.51. These agree closely with the adopted value. By reference to the straight line in Figure 5, it will be seen that the two scales coincide at A 2, the middle point of the second group. For point A, the reading is--0.07, which corresponds to a difference of +0.57 for Class F 8. The interval between the straight line and the curve for point F 8 indicates a value of +0.60. These values seem to indicate that the adopted difference should be slightly greater. The results derived from the plotting might easily be changed, however, by a readjustment of the abscissas selected to represent the several classes. For example, we might expect the reading of the straight line to be +0.50 for Class F8. This is not the case, as this reading corresponds to Class F 5. If we were to assume that the classification of spectra should be based on the amount of blue light rather than on the distinctions actually made, the class of Polaris would be F8. The change might be otherwise effected...
