

The Monster in the Closet: A Bumpy Ride Down the Genealogy Trail (Paperback)

By Judith Harris

American History Press, United States, 2012. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The Monster in the Closet: A Bumpy Ride Down the Genealogy Trail, by Judith Harris When Rome-based journalist and author Judith Harris set out on her roller coaster ride deep into the past, she had barely a handful of names, and nothing more. She ended up discovering pirates and Puritans, steamy sex exposed in a 17th century court in New England and even a close family connection to Abraham Lincoln. Settlers who arrived from England on a Winthrop ship in 1630, the Harrises were among the founders of Boston, where they ran the first ferryboat service. In the early 18th century a descendant became a successful Manhattan manufacturer before setting out for the prairies of Illinois. Thanks to land grant purchases he was a founder of Tremont, a town near Peoria. This prairie pioneer's young grandson built his own airplane and became a barnstormer at county fairs. A pioneer in American aviation, he was a pluri-decorated major who fought the world's first air war in World War One France. In civil life he was a prestigious architect in the...
