TVTOST of the artists have sent in their works for this years public exhibition; and the hanging committee are busily employed in arranging them according to their respective merits. Having obtained admission to the gallery, we present our readers with an account of the most distinguished pieces. No. i, A full-length portrait of Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam, by V. Melville, R. A. and A. S. S. His Lordship is drawn seated at his table, counting his money-bags, while one of his servants is seen silching the guineas, and trotting off with them to his banker. The outline is bold, but the colouring is coarse, and the light and shade are injudiciously contrasted. There is a palpable error in the costume, which is Caledonian, as is also the cast of his Lordships features. No. 2. A portrait of Alexander...
