Brand New Book  Print on Demand .People who have nine as their lucky number never, ever stop weaving their dreams. If you live with your heart open, fear becomes an adventure. I was ready, I guess. I was of age. In many ways, I had less than most-living on the plantation, saving pennies for food, fighting for floor space by the window, never seeing Father, tapping trees at dawn with Mother. And then there was my arm: I was leaving home with a terrible secret hidden under the sleeve of my blouse. But I was leaving with a good education. I had a strong foundation in several faiths. I was a hard worker, and honesty came easy. I did not have much of an ego left, but that would later prove to be advantageous. I had birds of paradise, monkeys swinging from trees, the roosters crowing at dawn. I had sunshine, and warm rain on my cheeks reminding me that life is about moments. There were shiny rubber tree seeds in my pocket representing the power and beauty of growth. Mostly, I was leaving with Mother s voice in my heart; it made me feel safe, as safe as a girl with only one good arm could feel. I had an incredible childhood, if you think about it. I literally won the lotto when it came to school. And those diamonds in my pocket were priceless to me. They were the reason I had anything at all. My arm brought panic, but sports changed my life. When I threw the shot putt, no one stared at the scars on my arm. Their eyes followed the path of the ball. And then they cheered....
