Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Two Bodies is a text that obliquely intersects Chilean national history and the personal history of Esteban, stories that circle graves and bodies and that end up running into each other at a red letter. Fragments of events in the country fully immersed in the Pinochet prosecution are united by the routine of an alienated physical therapist who mysteriously links objects, people and animals. It is a tense story with a disturbing atmosphere, where objects appear like judgments: a white lab coat, a plastic bag, a sandal, a halter, mealybugs, bottles, fingernails, a pamphlet in the street, a photograph, a circular phrase, a spade digging a hole, a mound in the yard. Lime, earth and stones circle around the streets where traces of bodies that once were there are recorded. The characters in this novel utter incomplete sentences, they know fragments of the big picture, nobody wants to impose a story because the narration occurs through them, but finally two bodies elaborate the discourse of this text. Two Bodies is an unsettling story that circles the streets of Santiago, in the outdoors, in the backyards of the houses, in the hospitals, on the roadways. Esteban, its cold protagonist, is a sleeping conscience who confronts a complicit silence with the Senator (Augusto Pinochet) in the dark glasses. Esteban goes from being a distant physical therapist in a white lab coat to a mysterious man who travels dirt roads, his automobile filled with empty bottles. He knows about the trials, about the weight of objects, about the evidence, this is why his life passes around sandals, flowerpots with mealybugs, plastic bags, a photograph, a pamphlet. Occasionally, during his getaway, he...
