By Jacob D Cox

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Jacob Dolson Cox, (Jr.) (October 27, 1828 - August 4, 1900) was a Union Army general during the American Civil War, and later a Republican politician from Ohio. At the beginning of the Maryland Campaign, Cox's brigade became the Kanawha Division of the IX Corps of the Army of the Potomac. When corps commander Maj. Gen. Jesse L. Reno was killed at the Battle of South Mountain, Cox assumed command of the IX Corps. He suggested to Maj. Gen. Ambrose Burnside, formally the commander of IX Corps, but who was commanding a two-corps wing of the Army, that he be allowed to return to division command, which was more in keeping with his level of military expertise. Burnside refused the suggestion, but at the Battle of Antietam, kept Cox under his supervision. The poor showing of the corps around Burnside Bridge at Antietam is generally attributed to Burnside, not Cox. Cox's account of the Battle of Antietam, part of the well known Battles Leaders of the Civil War Series, discusses the strategy and...

Reviews

It is an amazing publication which i actually have at any time go through. It really is written in easy words and phrases rather than hard to understand. Its been developed in an extremely easy way which is merely following i finished reading through this pdf in which actually changed me, affect the way i think.
