And this, I conceive, is to be accomplished not so much by changing the ground-work of the old system, as termed by modern grammarians, as presenting it in a clear and intelligible manner. With this view I have arranged a system on a new plan. As there are so many works of this kind before the public, the natural inquiry will be, In what respect does it differ from those already in use? Its peculiarities, in the main, are as follows: 1. In the arrangement and distribution of the general topics it is strictly practical and progressive. 2. Many technicalities, perplexing to the mind of the pupil without aiding his advancement, are omitted. 3. The arrangement of the Tenses has been much simplified.
