EED TRIBE ANTHEMIDEAE Achillea millefolium and vars. st cosmopolitan plants we know of occurring as it does throughout Asia, North America and Europe. In California it is abundant both on the coast and in the valleys and in the Sierras. It is strongly scented with very finely divided leaves from perennial roots. The terminal clusters of flowers are whitish often tinged with pale rose. The foliage is slightly pungent but nevertheless is eaten to a considerable extent by stock, especially sheep. In Sweden it is used as a substitute for hops. In Scotland it is used as an ingredient of an ointment which they apply to wounds and in England. Sometimes called Nose-bleed owing to its ancient use as a vulnerary. The women of the Orkney Islands make Yarrow tea and consider that it has the power of dispelling melancholy....
