Gentlemen of the jury, behold the murderer! With a wild convulsive start, a face of ashy pallor, eyes starting from their sockets, lips apart, his whole attitude evincing terror, the man sprang from his chair. For a moment he stood motionless, struggling to regain his self possession. But it was only a momentary struggle; the terrible words of the advocate shivered along his arteries, shaking every nerve with para lyzing fear. Conscious that the eyes of all in the court room were fixed upon him, reading the hidden deeds of his life, he left the witness stand, and walked shrinkingly to the door of the court room. But he was prevented by the sheriff from making his escape. This scene, so thrilling and startling, may, perhaps, be imagined, though it can not be described. It struck the spectators...
