Not illustrated. 1853 Excerpt: . found on her slate, on which she was accustomed to write notes for copying, the following lines: O that I were a Christian! How happy I should be! How happy my dear mother would be! And would it not be pleasing to God? Why am I not one? This pencilling had no date, but was probably written not long before the commencement of the journey on which she died; and these were perhaps the last sentences she ever wrote. He who will not break the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax, had, we doubt not, regarded her earnest desire here expressed, (though by no means now felt for the first time,) to be a lamb of His flock, and adopted her among the chosen of his fold Her change, as in all cases of conversion, was of course instantaneous; but its precise date she may not have been able to specify; and its outward development, as is often the case, especially in one of so lovely a temperament and character by nature, was gradual, like the rising light CHAPTER VIII. Judith s Last Joumey. In the foregoing pages, we have often spoken of the subject of this memoir, as little Judith. Liability to a mistaken impression, in regard to her size, from the use of that term, should perhaps again be mentioned, though forestalled in the preface. She was large of her age. Though but a little more than twelve years old, she...
