Excerpt from The Speaker, Vol. 4: August 1, 1891 We are, indeed, not sure whether street improve ments are, as a rule, the most urgent matters for the Council to deal with. It was all very well for the Metropolitan Board of Works to occupy itself with new streets when that body had neither the ideas nor the capacity, neither the will nor the means, to perform the countless public services which London expects from its new municipality. The Metropolis has for generations lain abandoned to merciless ex ploitation by private enterprise in even the most indispensable public functions of urban life, and the County Council will have a hard enough task merely to come by its own. The water supply and the gas, the docks and the tramways, the Home Secretary s police and the so-called Royal parks - all these have to be rescued for London, either from the private speculator in the necessarily collective administration of a great city, or from the equally tenacious clutches of Downing Street or George Ranger. The growth of tra ic doubtless demands...
