The Teaching of Agriculture in the Secondary Schools (Classic Reprint) (Paperback)

By Leroy Anderson

Forgotten Books, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Teaching of Agriculture in the Secondary Schools State. In 1898 Nebraska Opened a similar school at the College of Agriculture with an initial enrollment of three students. The number during 1909-10 was 350. Colorado is the winning state in the way of popular response to the announcement that a school of agriculture would be opened at the College. Such news was spread in August, 1909, and more than 100 appeared upon registration-day, early in October. Before the holidays the enrollment had increased to 200. The University of California Opened her school at Davis in January, 1909, with twenty students, and the present term has an enrollment of seventy-seven. Data are not at hand, nor does space permit, to record the growth of county and district agricultural schools in other states. Suffice it to say that as evidenced by attendance, all such schools have uniformly had reason to believe that the instruction given was meeting a distinct need in the community. Agriculture in the established high schools is of more recent development than in those just described. The growth,...
