Despite the extremely positive evolution of travel and tourism in Angola, the main tourism indicators are supported by business tourism flows. Although leisure tourism flows are increasing, concerns over corruption, violence and lack of safety affect the number of international arrivals to Angola. Alongside this, extremely high prices, particularly in Angola's capital, Luanda, which have led to this city becoming known as the most expensive in the world, influence the as yet underdeveloped levels of leisure tourism. Evolution of travel and tourism still heavily reliant on government investment Although the Angolan government is modern and liberal, the level of bureaucracy involved in international entrepreneurs establishing their companies in the country remains very high. As a result, although private investment is increasing, the principal measures which enabled evolution in travel and tourism were undertaken by the country's government, either through the implementation of political programmes, such as the Tourism Master Plan, or through the construction of facilities, in particular travel accommodation facilities. The main goal of the Angolan government in the forecast period is to improve...
