KIT PEDLER

Alphascript Publishing. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - Dr Christopher Magnus Howard 'Kit' Pedler (11 June 1927 - 27 May 1981) was a British medical scientist, science fiction author and writer on science in general. He was the head of the electron microscopy department at the Institute of Ophthalmology, University of London, where he published a number of papers. Pedler's first television contribution was for the BBC programme Horizon. In the mid-1960s, Pedler became the unofficial scientific adviser to the Doctor Who production team. Hired by Innes Lloyd to inject more hard science into the stories, Pedler formed a particular writing partnership with Gerry Davis, who was story editor on the programme. Their interest in the problems of science changing and endangering human life had led them to create the Cybermen. Pedler wrote three scripts for Doctor Who: The Tenth Planet, The Moonbase and The Tomb of the Cybermen. He also submitted the story outlines that became The War Machines, The Wheel in Space and The Invasion. Pedler and Davis devised and co-wrote Doomwatch, a British science fiction television programme produced by the BBC. 192 pp. Englisch.
