Phoenix Yard Books, United Kingdom, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Emmanuelle Houssais (illustrator). Reprint. Language: English . Brand New Book. Hot Air is a beautiful new look at global warming. The animals know something is wrong with the planet. But what? Farting cows, of course! Can the animals ever agree on a sustainable solution? And will they find it in time? REVIEWS: A fresh perspective on climate change, as animals from all over the planet take matters into their own paws and claws in order to identify what's causing the rise in temperature that is affecting everyone's habitat and, having pinned it down to flatulent bovines, put their snouts and beaks together to come up with some kind of solution. It's a smart narrative that's stylishly illustrated - and framed neither as a lecture nor a morality tale, but rather, as a problem waiting for an innovative response. Do your learners agree that farting cows are the main issue facing our planet today? What other potential dangers to the environment can they identify? And what clever ideas might they suggest in order to counteract them? -- TEACH PRIMARY. Hot Air introduces children to the very complex subjects of global warming and climate change and touches on international accountability and legacy while remaining very light and even utterly silly at times. Thanks to its quirky artwork, which uses mixed media including collage and intricate drawings full of amusing details, and a wacky storyline, the tale remains light at all times, avoiding a preachy and negative tone. Though the book does not offer a solution to climate change, it invites young readers to help seek one, encouraging ecological responsibility and making an active contribution to change. There is a rather cheeky but well deserved dig at international politics, and the...
